DESCRIPTION

Sault is a village that is critically lacking in long-term rental housing.

This strong demand is driven by several factors:

- Its economy is based on agriculture, particularly lavender cultivation, as well as a dynamic tourism industry linked to Mont Ventoux and the Luberon, which generates numerous local jobs.

The village also attracts professionals from the medical, education, and small business sectors.

With the rise of remote work, Sault has become a popular alternative to big cities, offering a pleasant living environment with more affordable rental prices. However, the rental supply remains limited, as many properties are either second homes or short-term rentals, increasing market pressure.

Few new constructions and a low tenant turnover further contribute to this shortage. This situation makes it a promising rental market, ideal for investors seeking a stable and secure return.

This building represents a rare investment opportunity, combining profitability with potential appreciation. Its layout allows for optimized rental management, whether for long-term or seasonal leasing.

The commercial space, approximately 120 m², is completely independent with two separate entrances and provides a stable source of income, thanks to an ongoing lease valid until March 2031. It has been recently fully renovated, including its façades, and is equipped with a heat pump, three storage rooms, and two restrooms.

A dedicated entrance for the residential units opens onto a staircase leading directly to seven apartments on the first and second floors. The ground-floor T3 apartment...
