IN BRIEF

Leggett Immobilier presents a magnificent, perfectly maintained historic Norman residence, situated on the site of the former castle, which served as the Hôtel de Normandie in the early 20th century and was built on the site of a feudal motte. It was on the ruins of the fortified castle, which was burned down by the English in 1356, that an inn was erected. Today it is the home of an established writer well known historian in the region. The importance of the building is not forgotten in his writing and today it remains an impressive village home filled period furniture et dripping in style.
