DESCRIPTION

Situated at the entrance to a small, peaceful hamlet, this authentic stone house dating from 1846 enjoys an exceptional setting, with no immediate neighbours, offering peace and quiet, privacy and a complete immersion in nature.

With a living area of 82.65 m², the house comprises, on the ground floor, a 6 m² kitchen and a superb living room measuring over 41 m². The true heart of the house, this cosy space charms with its fireplace with insert, its high ceilings and its magnificent antique tiles, which bear witness to the character and history of the property. A shower room with a toilet completes this level and can be modernised to suit individual tastes.

On the lower level, two adjoining bedrooms measuring 18 m² and 15 m² offer comfortable and light-filled spaces. They are fitted with wood-effect double-glazed PVC windows and laminate flooring.

The house benefits from a range of desirable features: reversible air conditioning, a fireplace with an insert, radiators in the bedrooms, and a heat recovery system that channels warm air from the fireplace into the sleeping areas. The windows and doors are double-glazed, made of either wood or PVC depending on the room. The loft is insulated with an eco-friendly material made from three-fibre organic hemp, and the roof has been regularly maintained. The property is also connected to fibre-optic broadband and has two parking spaces equipped with a charging point for electric vehicles.

Outside, nearly 3 hectares of mainly wooded land surround the house, ensuring...
