DESCRIPTION

Other highlights of this neighbourhood include its 'village-like' atmosphere in the heart of Paris – often described as one of the few places in the city centre to have retained a genuine sense of community – and it remains a mecca for Parisian gastronomy. There is a constant buzz of activity, with restaurants, bars, artisan bakeries, delicatessens, concept stores, galleries... and Rue Montorgueil with its year-round market. There are still a few historic shops and some of the street's traditional trade, but the area's image today is far more upmarket than it was twenty years ago. The property potential for a well-renovated flat in this charming, historic building generally offers: excellent resale potential; strong demand both as a main residence and as a second home; and good long-term appreciation.
